Because honestly, what is life if not one long guest list where showing up is half the halo? We're Social Animals, evolved from cavepeople who discovered fire solely so they could rave around it. Networking? Overrated. Net-working that dance floor? Essential. Small talk? Meh. Tall drinks? Foundational. Everything else - deadlines, spreadsheets, that gym membership you swore you'd use, is just background noise in the cosmic club mix. To live is to mingle, to mingle is to thrive, and if you're not shaking a leg, are you even shaking off the existential dread properly?
